BLACK STONE OF MECCA.

Has Been Kissed by Millions of Devotees.

The Black Stone of Mecca is unrivalled in the world as an object of veneration. It is, in fact, worn smooth by the kisses of millions of devotees since Mohammed himself kissed it more than thirteen hundred years ago.

Tradition says that the archangel Gabriel brought it to Abraham that he might mark the spot where Hagar raised an altar in the wilderness, and as the Arabs claim descent through Hagar's son, Ishmael, such a heavenly gift is naturally prized.

That it is in a scientific sense of heavenly origin there can be little doubt, for it is probably an aerolite, similar to many in the Natural History Museum at South Kensington, London, England. It is built into the southern corner of the Kaba, the sacred shrine of Islam, and the Kissing of it concludes the pilgrimage to Mecca.

NAPANEE BRANCH WOMEN'S INSTNITUTE

REPORT OF 1927-28.

The Napanee Branch of the Women's Institute has held ten regular meetings during the past year. One hundred and seventy-seven members have been enrolled, with an average attendance of 77.5. Seven lectures have been given, covering a variety of subjects. They are as follows:

"Relation of Branch, District and Federated Women's Institutes," by Mrs. C. Field Robertson.

"Canadian Women of Note," by Miss Helen Grange.

"Flowers," by Mr. Laughland.

"A Heart to Heart Talk With Busy Mothers and Homemakers," by Mrs. J. B. Miller.

Miss Lauder, V.O.N., gave an interesting address on her work.

"House Decoration," by Miss McManus.

"Health," by Miss McMillan.

Four demonstration lectures were given as follows:

"Canning Fruits and Vegetables," by Miss Preston.

"Varieties of Cookies from one recipe," by Mrs. J. Gould, Corkill.

"Hooking Rugs," by Mrs. R. Meyers.

"Salads and Salad Dressing," by Mrs. T. V. Anderson.

"Crepe Paper Novelties," by Miss M. Hawley.

As the annual Convention was held at Kingston this last year, many of our members were able to enjoy the sessions. Mrs. Jas. Douglas was our delegate, and brought back a splendid report. Mrs. Ralph Ham has been our delegate to the Local Council of Women in Kingston for the past five months, and has brought to us some interesting news of work being undertaken.

The Mother and Daughter Banquet was held on January 28th, when two hundred and thirty mothers and daughters sat down to a sumptuous banquet. Lady Foster, of Ottawa, addressed the audience, her subject being the League of Nations.

No courses were held by the Institute this year, but some of the members attended the four-weeks course held by the Department of Agriculture, which was indeed very instructive.

For this year's community work we have laid aside fifty dollars to be used in assisting the Council to name the streets of our town.

The Superintendent of Current Events, Mrs Ella Wagar, has kept the Institute posted on doings from every part of the world. She is to be congratulated on her excellent work. We also our Flower Superintendent, Mrs. R. S. Ham, as twenty-five of our members have been remembered with flowers during illness.

The officers for this year are:
President—Mrs. Ralph Ham.
1st Vice President—Mrs. T. V. Anderson.
Rec. Sec'y Treas.—Mrs. Frank Herrington.
District Director—Mrs. Jas. Laughland.
Executive Directors—Mrs. J. Laughland and Mrs. Gehan.
Directors—Mrs. Switzer, Mrs. Marsh, Mrs. Loynes, Mrs. Corkill, Mrs. Judson, Miss E. Herrington.
Flower Superintendent — Mrs. F. Marsh.
Superintendent Current Events —Mrs. E. Wagar.
Press Reporter—Mrs. A. MacGregor.

WALLACE-BATTEN

A very smart wedding took place on Sajurday last, in the church of St. Mary Magdalene, Napanee, when Miss Helen Brandon Wallace, only daughter of Mr and Mrs. Thomas Beattie Wallace, Pietfill, became the bride of Mr. Reginald Alexander Batten, third son of Mr and Mrs. Alexander Batten, Toronto.

Guests assembled from many parts of the Province to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. R. J. Dumbrille, Vicar of the Parish, and the Venerable Archdeacon Coleman of Kingston. My Cyril Waite played the wedding march.

The church never looked more beautiful, with its decorations of ferns, palms and cut flowers in the chancel and aisles.

The bride was given away by her father, and was charming in a period gown of ivory satin, the close fitting bodice trimmed with pearls, and the full skirt closely frilled in exquisite lace. The long court train, dropping from the shoulders, fell gracefully beneath the veil, which was shirred cap-like, into a coronet of pearls. She carried a flower bouquet of sweet-heart roses and lily of the valley and wore the groom's gift, an emerald and diamond ring.

The bride was attended by Miss Grace Boyes as maid of honor, and two little flower girls, Louise and Jean Gilbride. The maid of honor was lovely in a bouffant frock of yellow taffeta and tulle, picture hat of yellow mohair, yellow shoes and stockings. Her bouquet was yellow roses and she carried the groom's gift, a gold vanity case.

The flower girls were very sweet in French sleeveless frocks of yellow organdy, poke bonnets lined with mauve velvet ribbon, and carried baskets of mauve and white lilacs. They each received a silver bracelet.

The groom was supported by his brother, Cadet Jack Batten, and the ushers were Mr. Brock Batten, Peterboro; Mr. Howard Batten, Mr. Harmon Booth, Toronto, and Mr. Beverley Thompson, Napanee. The best man received cuff links and the ushers, canes.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Golf and Country Club, which was gaily decorated for the occasion, with white bells, smilax and fern streamers and flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace and Mr. and Mrs. Batten received with the bridal party.

Mrs. Wallace, mother of the bride, wore a smart creation of cerulean blue over pink satin, a sand georgette coat and large sand hat. She carried pink roses.

Mrs. Batten, mother of the groom, wore a beautiful gown of pale green chiffon Her coat of gold lace was lined with mauve plush and had a large white fox collar. Her hat was of matching glace mohair. Her bouquet was orchids.

Some of the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Batten, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Batten, Dr. and Mrs. Mavety, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Vrooman, Miss Kathleen Daly, Miss Eleanor Davis, Miss Emma McLennan, Miss Peggy Bailey, Miss Evelyn Gregory, Miss K. Soward, Mr. Davis, Mr. Pepper, Mr. David Morrison, Mr. Jack Batten, Mr. Harmon Booth, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Tomlins, Mr. E. Wallace Roy, Toronto; Mr. Brock Batten, Peterboro; Mrs. Arnaud Shindel, Scranton, Pa.; Mr. J. B. Wallace, Georgetown; Dr. and Mrs. K. L. McKinnon, Renfrew; Mr. and Mrs. J. McKeown, and Mrs. McPherson, Belleville; Mrs. U. J. Flasch, Carleton Place; Archdeacon Coleman and Mrs. Coleman, Miss Var and Miss Vair, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Herrington, Kingston; Rev. Hope Swayne, Bath, and Miss Isobel Wagar, Toronto.

COLEBROOK.

Miss Katharine Woodruff, New York City, is spending her holidays with her parents.

Miss F. Purcell, teacher, has not been able to teach for the last few days owing to illness. We hope she will soon be about again.

Some of our residents are making arrangements to spend the summer at camp at Varty Lake.

F. J. Garrison and Miss M. Edgar were quietly married at the home of the bride's parents at Yarker and are spending their honeymoon in Toronto and Niagara district. We wish them every happiness and a long and prosperous married life.

We are glad to welcome Mrs. E. Eshard back to her home, after spending the winter with relatives in Watertown.

ROBLIN.

Rev. and Mrs. Blanchard and baby Shirley, and Mrs. Frayne, of the Holiness Movement Church, left for their new appointment at Ottawa last week.

The Ladies' Aid at Mrs. J. Botting's last week was well attended. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Frank McConnell's on the 26th of this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Kimmett and family were motor visitors at Point Anne on Sunday.

A large number attended Mrs. Vicky McFarlane's sale on Wednesday.

Rev. Mr. Seale preached his farewell sermon on Sunday, before leaving for his new circuit at Violet.

A number from here motored to Orland for the convention on Sunday.

Miss Marie Paul spent the week-end with her sister Jean in Toronto.

There was no service in the United Church on Sunday, as Mr. Oliver was attending conference.

W. C. T. U. HELD ANNUAL MEETING

HASTINGS, LENNOX AN DADDINGTON AND PRINCE EDWARD WOMEN MET AT PICTON

The nineteenth annual W.C.T.U. convention for Hastings, Lennox, Addington and Prince Edward County, which was held in Picton last week, had its opening session on Thursday morning. The district President, Mrs N. B. Miller, presided. After the nomination of committees, Plan of Work, Resolutions, etc., the reports of Corresponding Secretary, Treasurer and Superintendents of Departments were read and proved very encouraging. Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth conducted the memorial service and prayer.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. N. Farley, of Belleville, told 'How to Prepare a Correct Directory." Mrs. Emma Chase, Vice-President, then gave a report of the work covered by Dr. Detwiler, during her visit here. In the absence of Mrs. Hudgin, Selby, and Mrs. George, of London, Mrs. Dennison outlined the necessary arrangements for Provincial Field Secretaries.

Next came a most forceful address by Mrs. R. M. Seymour, Provincial Superintendent of "Sabbath Observance." Mrs. Seymour very earnestly dealt with this subject, strongly advising the mothers and fathers to attend Sunday School with their children and above all to have a real, outer and Christian literature in the homes, and stated it behooved every one of us to live like the Master and keep the Sabbath Day holy as was His custom. Mrs. T. Blakely briefly explined the matter of teaching temperance in the Sunday schools. Miss Helen Way, secretary of the Y's, gave her report. Picton has a membership of 29 and the total membership in the district is 101. Mrs. E. J. Shorey spoke on Jubilee Year, the Union having fifty years of work in the Province. Picton has the honor of the first Union in the Province and two weeks later one was organized in Bowmanville. Mrs. O. N. Rothwell gave the history of the county organizations.

Mrs. Marjorie Sullivan sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. Melvin Taylor, and the forming of The Daisy Chain by the Presidents of the various districts brought this session to a close. Thursday evening the devotional exercises were conducted by Ensign Payton. Ensign Payton and Mrs. Payton sang a duet in a very pleasing manner. The choir rendered an anthem, after which the speaker of the evening, Mrs. Kerr, Provincial Vice-President, of Ottawa, was introduced. Mrs. Kerr's theme was "Wild Oats, What is our Task." Our task is to work, to bring about prohibition of the sale and manufacture of liquor entirely.

The speaker was of the opinion that the liquor interests were making their last stand and that the different Temperance Unions well organized, Prohibition is sure to come. Mrs Kerr proved herself to be a pleasing and versatile speaker, holding the attention of her hearers throughout her address. Mrs. Kathleen Hicks rendered a solo accompanied by Prof. Walden.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of this session was the presentation of prizes in Essay Contest by Mrs. (Dr.) Baker as follows:

V Form—1st, B. Gibbard, Napanee, Lower School C.I., $3.00; 2nd, Alice Hale, Madoc, $2.00.

1st, Lois Sealter, Napanee C.I. Upper School, $3.00; 2nd, Marion Sills, Napanee C.I. Upper School, $2.00.

THE "DEATH" TREE.

It Is Said Those Who Rest In Its Shade Die.

An expedition is proceeding to Central Africa to search for a strange poison, which is native call the "death" tree. It is said that those who rest in its shade become unconscious and, if not rescued in time, die.

Criminals of the native tribes in the region where these trees flourish are executed by being pinioned and placed under the branches of the "death" tree, which is described as quite ordinary-looking, with a white flower.

The "death" tree idea is fairly old and it will be interesting to learn the result of the expedition.

For a long time the upas tree of Java had an even worse reputation than the African plant. It was said that it was so poisonous that to come within ten or twelve miles of it was to invite certain death. But we now know that the upas tree legend was based on a very slender foundation. A poisonous sap, in which arrows were dipped, was obtained from it by the natives, but its most spectacular poisoning feats were only "travellers' tales."

SEEN FROM THE SIDELINES

The Lennox and Addington Baseball League will have its local opening at the Driving Park here, on Wednesday. The advance sale of tickets has been heavy, and it is expected that the largest crowd of the season will be in attendance. The opposing team will be Allqbustown, and the boys from the bay are anxious to get a win, which would put them into a tie for the League leadership, now held by Napanee. Of course Manager Fred Carter will have his strongest line-up on hand, to consolidate the position of the Napanee team on the top of the heap, so a real game may be expected.

Some of the prominent citizens and civic officials will be on hand to assist in the opening ceremonies. The Mayor, Mr. E. J. Roy, assister by Jas. Mine, M.P.P., will attempt to strike out Mr. J. G. Daly and Mr. W. A. Grange, the President of the Club. This ought to be good Manager Carter has three pitchers ready for this affair, Byrom, Daverin and Bentley all being capable of turning in winning efforts, and in Cairns, Napanee has a catcher who can hold them up. The infield is as strong as ever, and Blakely, Daverin and Reid in the outfield are all competent fly chasers. Napanee ought to go a long way this year.

Hats off to the Nationals, of Toronto! There may be better baseball clubs in the business, but they have never played in this part of the country. In every department they ware as near to perfect as could be desired.

A good crowd was on hand in the Armouries on Saturday night, for the Toronto girls, with their neat uniforms, clever chatter, and pleasing personality, have always been prime favourites here. On other occasions they have come to Napanee, obtained a lead of ten or twelve runs, and have been content to hold it, but when they faced Margaret Douglas they saw that they could not afford to take the chances that they had done before. So they played their best, and they showed us how the game is played.

Let us first of all speak of Miss Thelma Golden. She has been seen here before, having pitched a few games last year, when she was just commencing to obtain stardom. This year she shows the effects of a year of steady work. Her wildness of last year was gone, and the speed of last year has increased. When she chooses to use it she has speed which a Walter Johnson would envy. A couple of Napanee players did get on the paths by walks, but she gave no hit at all until the fourth, when a single by Mary Stinson and a double by Marion Douglas sent two runs across. Miss Golden gave a wonderful exhibition of speed-ball pitching. In the fifth inning, Marjorie Ellerby took her place in the box, in order to get all the Toronto players into the game. Miss Ellerby may be classed as a veteran, if such a thing as a seventeen-year-old veteran were possible. The umpire and the catcher saw what she did with the ball; but the batsmen saw it at all. She pitched for three innings and struck out eight. One batter got a short pop fly. She makes speed with curves, drops, and everything else. It is not difficult to believe that she won thirteen games in her league in Toronto. She is a wonderful pitcher. Behind the plate was Emily Gault and a new catcher, Mary Wands. With so few runners on the bases they got little opportunity for throwing to bases, but what they are noted, and their work as receivers was above reproach. Miss Richards seems to be a real find. At first base she same Marion Thaine performed in all her accustomed style, while second, occupied in former years by "Jerry" Stinson, was occupied by "Tiny" Seymour. Captain "Eddie" Crawford is at short again, with Nancy Barr on third. The places of Bessie Booty. They made no errors; they never do. With absolute accuracy they grabbed everything that came their way apparently with the greatest ease. This infield has a faculty for making hard chances look easy, whereas the average of the steps they made would have been impossible for less expert players. In the outfield were May Wands, Kay Connacher, and Dora Tomlin. It was expected that balls hit against the girders of the armouries would bother the outfielders, but they have played here before, and know what to do. It was noticed that when such an occasionally occurred that every fielder was in on the play Because the ball happened to be hit to her field was no reason for the right fielder to let it go. Consequently when the ball would take one of these unexpected bounds the girls, the player near where it fell always got it. In the last part of the game Miss Johnston relieved Miss Golden, and "Jerry" Sibbald took the place of Kay Connacher. Unfortunately they had no work to do at all. It was by far the best exhibition game of softball ever seen here and played by the strongest team to ever step on the armouries floor.

Had it not been that Margaret Douglas was pitching, the game might have been another of the sensible affairs to which we have become accustomed, when a strong visiting team plays. Last year when Toronto had a safe lead they very obviously eased up, but they saw they had to work to beat Margaret's pitching. The first few Toronto batters, as they returned to the bench, after fanning, remarked, with wide eyes, "Say, she's got speed!" That was easy to see. More than one National looked foolish as the third strike went by. But the plate, for her, was very elusive. She was very stingy with hits, but far too generous with passes, and seventeen batters reached first on a free ticket. That gives us the reason for the score. Mary Stinson caught as well as ever, and once again Marion Grass at first was outstanding. Mary swung at second, apart from being a bit slow at getting a ball down on a runner, played a good game, and Violet Whitton was specially imported for the event, work at short, and she showed that she can play the position as well as ever. She backed up third base beautifully on many plays. Hazel O'Neil started at third, but presently retired with a sore finger, her place being well taken by Miss Thompson, a newcomer. In the outfield Dorothy McPherson, Marion Douglas and Almeda Babcock worked well.

The Napanee girls are obviously unaccustomed to pitching of the sort they faced. Many of the batters were swinging feebly after the catcher had the ball in hand, but occasionally a batter got a walk, in the second inning Almeda Babcock reaching third by this method, but she was tagged going home by Nancy Barr, who made a remarkable play on a fly ball off the rafters.

Nationals..... 2 8 3 0 2 0 2—17
Napanee..... 0 0 0 2 0 0 0 0—2

Golden, Ellerby, Gault and Richards; Douglas and Stinson.

The Nationals were entertained by the Napanee girls and a few of the fans over night, and left for Kingston at 5.02 Sunday afternoon, to play two games there on Monday. They seemed to enjoy themselves, and all are eager to have the Napanee girls visit them in Toronto in the fall.

Accompanying the team were Mr. and Mrs. Coulter, of Toronto, Dr. A. B. Babcock and Tommy Clark, as umpire. Mr. Coulter is a prominent Toronto Broker, who is the financial backer of the Nationals on this trip.

Jack Adams, who umpired behind the plate, insists on a protector if he does the job again, with Thelma Golden in the box. He stopped one of her fast ones and doesn't want to do it again. How girls like Emily Gault and Mary Richards can field a ball that fast ball at all is a wonder.

The dance after the game, was well attended, the Napanee Blue Jackets and the Blue Jackets were at their best.

NEWBURGH.

Mrs. Fox, of Kingston, spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. Alice Milligan.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Paul, two daughters and Mrs. Scriver, of Toronto, visited with Mrs. Shorey recently.

The stork paid Newburgh a visit on Monday and left a pair of twins, (boy and girl) at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Carter.

Mrs. Arthur Wilson, Lansdowne-Fredericksburgh, visited with Mr. and Mrs. James Wales.

Mrs. Earl Craig visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wales, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hopper, Mr. and Mrs. Wagar, of Toronto, motored through this vicinity recently and visited with Mr. and Mrs. James McCormick and Mrs. Fred Wales of Switzerville.

Miss Lillith Gandier has returned from Florida, where she spent the winter, and is now the guest at the home of her brother, E. Gandier. Miss Annie Gandier is also his guest.

Miss Briscoe received word on Monday last of the death of her sister, Mrs. Eakins of Leamington. Mrs. Eakins was born at Centreville and spent her earlier years in Newburgh and will no doubt be remembered by some of the inhabitants.

Fred Frost, manager of this branch of the Standard Bank, is moving into his new home lately purchased from W. Patterson. Mr. Patterson is occupying Mr. Simkins' house on North Maine street.

Ed. Harrison has improved his property by the addition of a silo.

Miss Grace King is visiting friends in Tweed and district.

Lorne Fox is a patient in a hospital in Kingston at present and his shoe repair shop is closed.

Mrs. Lloyd Ross returned from Kingston General Hospital, where he has been receiving care for the past few weeks, having been severely injured while working on the Perry telephone line.

Arthur Storey is now employed at W. W. Adams' tailor shop.

Wm. Mulholland has returned from Kingston General Hospital, where he has been for the past few weeks.

MOST people know this absolute antidote for pain, but are you careful to say Bayer when you buy it? And do you always give a glance to see Bayer on the box—and the word genuine printed in red? It isn't the genuine Aspirin without it! A drug-store always has Bayer, with the proven directions tucked in every box:

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assure the public against imitations, the Tablets will be stamped with their "Bayer Cross" trade mark.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY REV. C. G. TRUMBULL. (Editor of The Sunday School Times).

THE ARRET AND TRIAL.

Sunday, June 10.—Mark 14:43 to 15:15.

Golden Text—He is despised andrejeted o men. (Isa. 53:3).

The sinless Son of God was now voluntarily submitting Himself to be identified with the sin of men. It is, to our human and finite minds, an incomprhensible substitution. Sinlessness and sin have nothing in common. The sinlessness of the eternal Christ, in His righteousness, holiness, purity, truth and love are utterly beyond our power to understand or imagine. Yet this Christ took the place of a sinner. His betrayal, arrest, and trial were the beginning of His final and supreme identification with sin on the cross. During the hours of this night and the next morning He voluntarily let Himself be treated, by sinners, as though He were a sinner far beneath their standards, even beneath their contempt. That is something of what it cost Him to become our Saviour.

With Judas there came into the garden "a great multitude with swords and staves," to arrest Christ. One man alone could have taken Him whenever Christ was ready. Until Christ was ready all the armies of the earth could not have taken Him. His enemies had tried to lay hold on Him, and even take His life, before this time; but they could not.

Now they could, because He permitted it.

Judas had arranged to betray the Lord with a kiss, thus indicating His identity to the men who might not know Him. There is much of this Judas—betrayal with a kiss today. A vast number of persons within the professing Christian Church are betraying Christ with a kiss, as they speak highly of Him, approve of Him, even feign worship of Him, and all the while rejecting His unique claims as God and His unique sacrifice as the sinner's substitute.

Like a flash of lightning from Heaven John's account of the arrest records a miracle that reveals the omnipotence of Christ and the powerlessness of His enemies. They named "Jesus of Nazareth" as the one whom they sought, and the Lord answered: "I am He." At those words they fell to the ground, impotent, paralyzed. They could not under stand what had happened, of course; but how strange it must have seemed to them as they went on with their arrest and led the Lord of Glory away.

His enemies are now with Him; His disciples and friends "all forsook Him, and fled." What a pitiful picture is Simon Peter! One moment stupidly, sinfully drawing a sword and slashing at a servant of the high priest; the next moment running like a craven coward; and an hour or two later denying, as he cursed and swore, that he had ever known "this man of whom ye speak." Peter is picture of us all. Let us not hold him in any more contempt than we hold ourselves. He simply set forth the sinfulness of our nature. If we are sure we would have done better in his place, that very self-confidence is evidence of our sin.

Because of what Christ went through as His disciples abandoned Him, He could save and restore them; and He can save and restore us.

It is notable that the chief priests and the council could not secure convincing witnesses against Christ. There was no difficulty in getting false witnesses, "but their witness agreed not together." The testimony broke down. Then what?

The Lord Jesus Christ was convicted by the words of His own mouth. The high priest turned to Him and asked Him directly, "Art Thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?" And Jesus said, "I am: and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of Heaven."

It was enough. He was claiming deity for Himself. "What need we any further witnesses? Ye have heard the blasphemy: what think ye?" And they all condemned Him to be guilty of death." It is important to remember this when we hear the Unitarian arguments and claims today in the effort to prove that Christ is not God. It was because His enemies knew that He claimed to be just that, He was put to death. Nothing else would have been blasphemy. Either He was really what He claimed to be or He was an imposter. The Unitarian Christ is an imposter. The real Christ, the only begotten Son of God, was crucified because of His true claims.

When the Jews brought Jesus before Pilate he asked Him another direct question: "Art Thou the King of the Jews?" The Lord's answer was equally direct. "Thou sayest"; which was the idiomatic way of saying "I am." When Pilate put this inscription for the cross of Christ later, "The King of the Jews," it may not have been in mockery or irony, but a sober evidence of Pilate's uneasy and self-accusing conviction.

Then came the climax, when Pilate offered to release to them either Jesus or a murderer, Barabbas. They chose the murderer, and "killed the Prince of life" (Acts 3:15).

"Why is He silent when a word,
Would slay His accusers all?
Why does He meekly bear their taunts,
When angels wait His call?

"He was made sin; but sin He bore,
Upon the accursed tree;
And sin hath no defense to make—
His silence was for me."

ARE YOU A GOOD DRIVER?

BY ERWIN GREER

(President Greer College of Electrical and Automotive Trades, Chicago, Ill.)

"What are the characteristics of a good and safe driver?" That was the question recently asked by the American Automobile Association of several nationally known traffic and safety experts.

1. The good driver has a high degree of self-control at all times this control manifesting itself in various ways.

2. The good driver always maintains his car in such shape that it responds easily and quickly, thus assuring control of the car, as far as the purely mechanical equation is concerned.

3. The good driver regulates his speed in accord with the conditions of the road over which he is travelling, and never travels at such a rate that he cannot stop it within the clear course ahead.

4. The good driver invariably exercises due regard for the rights of others and always applies the simple axioms of courteous behavior.

5. The good driver accepts the safety of the pedestrian as a primary consideration.

6. The good driver keeps his mind on the road ahead, as daydreaming or chattering at the wheel causes many more accidents than are caused by bee stings.

If you are hitting on all six you are doing your part to promote safety insofar as your personal responsibility is concerned. The points stressed are not intended to be exhaustive, but they certainly embody some of the main moral and physical factors involved in safe and sane driving. By taking them to heart the average motorist can do much to relieve himself and other users of the highway of the multiplicity of laws and regulations which instead of solving the accident problem, is proving a serious impediment to progress. As I see it, the universal acceptance by the motorists of a high degree of personal responsibility is fundamental

GERMANY'S FORESIGHT.

Unknown Greatest Englishmen Sold Discovery to Huns.

English steel interests, failing to recognize the genius of a native son, driving him to other fields in which to apply the findings of his research, caused the creation of militaristic, industrial Germany which rose in fifty years from the defeated Prussia of 1870.

Such was the declaration of Andrey Bond, well-known Toronto barrister, who spoke at a dinner of the Toronto Home Builders' Association on "The Unknown Greatest Englishman," whom the speaker revealed as Sidney Gilchrist Thomas, who discovered the method of dephosphorizing steel in Bessemer converters.

Mr. Bond sketched the early years, struggles and endeavors of young Thomas. He described in glowing terms his great discovery and his bitter disappointment at the skepticism and indifference of the great iron masters of England. The greater forestural Department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont., and the resultant growth of that country from the simple farming groups of people of 1870, to the huge industrial military machine that commenced the war of wars after Bismarck had welded it together and Thomas had made its great prosperity possible.

"Sidney Gilchrist Thomas, passed away at the age of 35," said Mr. Bond, "unwept, unhonored, and unsung. His name is almost unknown to us, but never, in the history of nations, has a man left a deeper, more clearly marked footprint on the sands of time, than the subject of my address, the greatest unknown Englishman."

"This man made Germany a wealthy, all powerful world power. It grew into a great military machine. A force that provoked the greatest war the world has ever known. His influence made these things possible. Made steel the dominant factor it is in our lives to-day. A factor as great as that of fire and water."

DEAFNESS AN AID.

Constant Noise Seldom Disturb Girls Counting Money.

A New York store was having great difficulty in getting girls for its cash department, where automatic carriers come from the counters, says the Federation of Organizations for the Hard of Hearing at Washington, D.C. Girls were hired, but they would not stay.

The head of the department became so discouraged that, as a last resort, he suggested to his superiors to try hard-of-hearing girls. They told him: "You are crazy," but they let him try the plan.

The deafened girls were hired. It was found that the constant noise of the carriers rattling along through the tubes did not jar on them in the least, and so they were seldom disturbed in their counting and making correct change. The deafened girls could win out where the hearing girls were a failure.

An instance where a deafened person has made ingenuity compensate for her handicap is that of Mrs. H. E. Hess, of Brooklyn, N.Y. Mrs. Hess did not use to have company, because she could not hear the doorbell ring. Now she always knows when any one is at her door door, by an electrical arrangement, the electric bulbs become illuminated all over the house every time any one pushes the button of the doorbell.

In Philadelphia has just been established the only league in the world exclusively for negroes who are hard of hearing. France, England, Germany, Japan, Switzerland, India and almost every state in the United States has its hard-of-hearing organizations, but this is the first one for negroes. Miss Henrietta Sparrow, a negro, has been instructed by teachers of lip reading, and she, in turn, instructs the classes, which meet every week.

JASPER PARK IS POPULAR

The National Parks of Canada are growing in popularity, both with Canadians and with visitors from other countries, according to a report from the Canadian National Railways hotel department, based upon the number of visitors accommodated during the season of 1927 at Jasper Park Lodge, the railways' hotel which is situated in Canada's largest National Park in the heart of the Canadian Rockies. Not only are the numbers of United States citizens greater than in previous years, but the registration figures show a growing tendency on the part of Canadians themselves to take advantage of the magnificent playgrounds which have been set aside for them. Of total registrations, for periods longer than one day, numbering 6,500, approximately 2,600 registered from points in Canada, a greater registration of Canadians than in any previous year.

Of the 6,500 guests who registered at the Lodge during the 1927 season, 3,600 were from points in the United States, the state of California leading with 840 registrations. Other states largely represented were Illinois with 460; New York State, 348; Minnesota, 251; Ohio, 208; Pennsylvania 161 and Michigan 85.

Of those registering from Canada, 278 were from Quebec; 978 from Ontario; 455 from Manitoba; 395 from British Columbia; 358 from Alberta; 231 from Saskatchewan and the balance from the Maritime provinces.

There are several reasons for the growing popularity of Jasper Park Lodge, according to A. S. McLean, General Superintendent of Canadian National Hotels. The building of additional highways and trails in the park, making the distant beauty spots more accessible to visitors, the construction of chalets at such beauty spots as Medicine and Maligne Lakes and the spreading fame of Canada's finest scenic golf course being among them. At Medicine and Maligne Lakes—the latter the largest glacial lake in the Canadian Rockies, chalets have been built for the convenience of trail riding parties and trails have been improved so that the journey of sixty miles through the mountains is delightful and without hardship.

There is also the fact that during the past season the area of the park has been extended to 5,200 square miles by taking in the magnificent Columbia icefield section, one of the finest big game territories in the Rockies and comprising the largest icefield in Canada.

At the conclusion of their convention at Edmonton this year, the members of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association will visit Jasper Park Lodge and will spend a short time in this magnificent mountain playground.

TWO GIANTS OF SHIPPING CIRCLES

The Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Australia" is seen in the huge floating drydock at Southampton, England, where she was placed for inspection after her South America-Africa cruise. This dock bears the reputation of being the largest of its kind in the world with a length over all of 960 feet, width at the point of entrance being 134 feet and the depth of water over the keel blocks is 38 feet.

FREE FIELD INSPECTIONS

CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES—LISTS CLOSE JUNE 15.

(Experimental Farms Note)

The Division of Botany, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, will list applications for inspection, free of charge, of plots planted with Certified Seed potatoes, with a view to certification. Application must be made, on the proper form provided, and be received for listing not later than June 15, in order to receive free inspection.

Applications received after that date cannot be guaranteed inspection. Where possible, inspection may be granted late applicants, but only upon their agreeing to pay all costs incurred by the inspector in connection with his visits.

Application forms may be obtained from Mr. O. W. Lachaine, District Inspector, c/o Horticultural Department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont., and will be accepted at the same address for listing for inspection.

It is not the chief purpose of the Department of Agriculture to encourage growers to plant certified seed with a view to bringing their crops inspected for certification purposes, because every potato-grower has not the necessary patience and the time, or suitable location and equipment for growing certified seed. The object rather is to have growers plant the best seed obtainable for their commercial crop, and to help to keep down to a minimum destructive plant diseases with their resultant serious effect on yields. It is desirable to obtain grater acre-yields and so to reduce the cost of production. The use of certified seed on many farms would double the yields now being obtained.

CASTLE OF THE TAIKO.

Japan May Restore Fortress With Winged Pagoda-Like Roofs.

The remarkable "Castle of the Taiko" at Osaka is to be restored in part by the Osaka Municipal Government if the consent of the War Office can be obtained.

The Taiko, often dubbed the Napoleon of Japan, erected the most impregnable castle - fortress known to medieval Japan on a high hill overlooking the city of Osaka. The Tokugawa Shoguns, successors to his power as de facto rulers of the empire, destroyed the castle buildings during a subsequent civil war, and they have never been restored.

The walls, bastions, moats and other means of defence were not, however, destroyed. These walls consist of stones so enormous that the work, considering the primitive machinery available, has been rated as one of the wonders of the world.

Within the walls were numerous buildings, many of them of high timbers coated with plaster and roofed with tiles. The main watch tower rose to a height of seven stories, its winged roofs, somewhat like those of a pagoda, making it a structure of dignity and beauty. It is this tower which will be restored.

Prior to the coming of Portuguese, Spanish and Dutch to Japan in the sixteenth century, Japanese buildings were of the flimsiest type. The Europeans brought firearms with them, necessitating more solid construction for castles in a land of almost constant civil warfare. Building ideas were likewise borrowed from their European visitors by the Japanese, but architecturally, the influence of ancient China prevailed. The result was the erection of castles of great artistic beauty.

A Novel Idea.

Built in the shape of a ball, about 80 feet in diameter, and standing on a base 16 feet square, a house constructed for this year's Dresden fair is a German architect's suggested solution for the transport question. He claims that his design leaves much more room in the streets round it.

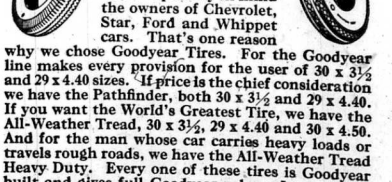
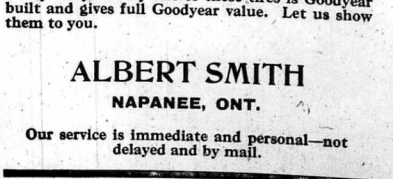
Time to Buy TIRES





WHEN we selected our stock of tires we had specially in mind the owners of Chevrolet, Star, Ford and Whippet cars. That's one reason why we chose Goodyear Tires. For the Goodyear line makes every provision for the user of 30 x 3½ and 29 x 4.40 sizes. If price is the chief consideration we have the Pathfinder, both 30 x 3½ and 29 x 4.40. If you want the World's Greatest Tire, we have the All-Weather Tread, 30 x 3½, 29 x 4.40 and 30 x 4.50. And for the man whose car carries heavy loads or travels rough roads, we have the All-Weather Tread Heavy Duty. Every one of these tires is Goodyear built and gives full Goodyear value. Let us show them to you.

The Knight of the Silver Star

A Romance of Drusselland

By PERCY BREBNER

Copyright, 1927, by R. F. Fenno & Co

"No. There is the weak spot in my plan. I have tried to communicate with her, but I have failed. In her excitement she may betray you before you are prepared."

"Prepared for what?"

"She will not be alone when you arrive," he answered. "At court it is believed that Count Vasca is to marry the Lady Aldrida. They pose as lovers, and, so far as the lady is concerned, she believes that the future is settled. Count Vasca has no intention of marrying her. Not only does he mean to be king in Yadasarn, but he means to marry the princess if he can. He has the king's permission to interview the princess. If he succeeds in obtaining her consent she is to go free with him this very night. He may use what persuasion he will."

"Then the king wished to save her?"

"On the contrary, it is only because he feels sure that the count will fail that he has given his consent. The count is too powerful to be refused a favor if he fails, then the princess suffers tomorrow in the manner you know of. The king has promised Lady Aldrida that Vasca has an elaborate scheme which is arranged in every detail. He will use persuasion. He will play upon her fears. For that purpose he will unlock the slab to show her the death road she is to take tomorrow. He will probably attempt to take her even without her consent, or he might kill her if she refuses him too contemptuously. Whether he succeeds or not, he has no intention of going to the king. He will leave the fortress with her and go straight to the city gate. He will go the way you must have gone the night you escaped. A boat is lying hard by the great rock. He will cross the river and before dawn will be in the woods which lie to the south. There is a woodcutter's cottage there, and horses will be waiting for him."

"He means to leave Drusselland?" I asked.

O'Ryan smiled.

"No. Tomorrow the revolution will commence. Half the city is Vasca's already."

"The princess will not consent," I said after a pause.

"Yet Vasca must succeed tonight," said O'Ryan slowly, "the Vasca I am thinking of. The count will be alone with the princess and will have the keys of the dungeon. You will enter, and you will kill him. Take his cloak and hat and sword. Then drag his body to the slip and let it go. Use expedition. Open the door and walk out of the fortress. Do not speak if you can help it. Your voice might betray you. As you go through the city you will be watched, but have no fear. They will be watching to see that you come to no harm. They are your friends. The city gate will open for you at a sign, and you are free to make the best of your way to the woodcutter's cottage. I shall be waiting there with horses."

"And afterward?"

"Unless you are delayed, by dawn we should be well on our way toward the place where you entered this infernal country. We must trust to luck to find the way out. Now do you thoroughly understand?"

"Yes. When do I go?"

"You will presently hear the guard changed in the corridor without. Then tie your rope securely and descend. Here is a sword. See that you do not drop it as you go down. Do not go before your time or you will ruin everything. Don't be too courteous with Vasca. Once he hired an assassin to stab you in the dark; just remember that and slay him as you would a mad dog. Now I must go."

We grasped each other's hand, and he left me.

Suddenly I heard the guard changed. The time had come, and my heart beat faster. I waited until the sound of the men's measured tread had died away down the corridor, and then I went to the slab. A dozen fears took hold of me at that moment. Indeed, my hand trembled as I put the key into its hole.

It turned easily, and the next moment I had raised the slab.

The dungeon was pitch dark. I had to be careful not to slip into the hole. I could hear the swish of the river far below me—a noisy sound it was, coming up through the shaft.

I found the ring, and to it I tied the rope. I tested the security of the knots at least half a dozen times before I let the rope go. It swung out to its length with a jerk. I fastened the sword tightly round me, and then I stood for a moment. It was a short prayer I muttered—too short, perhaps, for the great matter I was entering upon, but it was an earnest one. Then I sat upon the edge of the slip and, grasping the rope with both hands, let myself go, dropping to my full length.

It was the way that only dead men took, yet I, a living one, was about to take it.

It had seemed pitch dark in the dungeon, yet I hung in a greater blackness and could discern the opening above my head. I wasted no time now I had begun my journey. It was simply a matter of sliding down the slip and steadying myself by the rope. This was easy enough.

I must have traversed nearly the fifty feet of rope, yet my feet had always met the wall. I had come to no other hole, no other slip joining the main shaft. Hand over hand I went down, first feeling the rope with my feet to make certain that I was not at the end of it, then feeling the wall, not to miss the opening I sought for. Hand over hand, then my feet dangling below me—there was no more rope. For an instant I felt inclined to let go and fall to death, so ending my troubles. Then I went up hand over hand in desperate haste, and, having got the rope between my knees again, I hung, swinging, and steadied myself to think. Either I had missed the hole or O'Ryan was mistaken; the rope was not long enough. Perhaps it was because the first solution was the most acceptable that I believed it to be the correct one. I took courage and climbed upward, stretching my legs to right and left searching for the hole. I might have missed it even then had I not heard a sound that made me listen intently. Yes; it was distinct from the hissing of the water below me, the murmur of a man's voice. Was it above me in the dungeon I had escaped from? If so, I had only to wait a few moments. I should feel the rope jerked, or else it would be cut, and so an end to me. I hung, waiting, and still in a dull monotone the voice went on. Suddenly a little below me and to my left the rocky wall seemed to grow luminous, a flickering light that shone for a moment, then died, then shone again.

"Is that a good way out of life?"

The voice sounded low, yet the words were distinct. The light flickered and then slowly went out. I lowered myself to the level where it had been and then, holding the rope with [illegible] one hand, worked my way along the face of the wall with the other. I made slow progress, but presently I grasped the side of the slip. Cautiously I felt for the door of it with my foot. After some minutes I succeeded in finding it, but it was, if anything, at a sharper angle than the slip from my dungeon. How to get a footing upon it was a matter for consideration. As it was, I had to hold on to the side of the slip to prevent the rope swinging back with me, for instead of being directly under my dungeon, as O'Ryan had led me to suppose, this opening was a good ten feet to one side of it. Fortunately the walls of it were rough hewn, and, clinging to the rope with my knees and feet, I managed to drag myself inward with my hands, my nails and fingers suffering in the operation. By letting the rope slide between my knees gradually as I advanced I brought myself to the floor some feet from the edge of the slip. I chose the spot and then dropped forward on my hands and knees. The released rope swung back and was gone. There was no return now. I had dropped very cautiously, and all my energy had been centered on what I was doing. Now I was aware that above me, at the top of the steep ascent, there was a light. O'Ryan had not deceived me. The trap in the dungeon was open.

There was a pillar in the middle of the dungeon, supporting the low vaulted roof, and to a ring in the pillar a torch was fixed. A breeze from the open trap caught the flame, making it flicker weirdly and cast strange shadows. On a couch at the foot of the pillar sat Daria, her hands clasped in her lap. She hardly seemed to listen to Vasca, who was standing close to her, talking rapidly.

"I have been ambitious. I have deceived you. I crave your pardon. I have not done it for myself alone. I have done it for you. My love has spurred me on. They would make me king. It has been your ambition to reign in Yadasara. Now your ambition may be realized."

"You are not a king."

"Tonight; no, tomorrow"— He broke off excitedly. "Say that you will be queen of Yadasara, my queen, and now, this instant, this dungeon door is open to you. In a few hours you shall have the nation at your feet craving your favors. Your word shall bring death or grant life. Your will shall be law in Drusseland and he who speaks the humblest yet the happiest of your slaves."

"A pleasing prospect most easily spoken of."

"It is true. Tomorrow at this time I shall be king. The last obstacle is overthrown."

5 hours —OR 3 minutes ?

Floyd W. Parsons, the well-known publicity expert said that on his last trip to France the telephone authorities told him it would take five hours to give him telephone connection between Paris and Havre. It only takes a railway train five hours.

Here, he could have been talking as great a distance in three or four minutes—if he gave the operator the distant number.

If you don't know the distant number, Long Distance will look it up for you, and tell you what it is, so you can make a memo. of it for future use.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"You play a double game, Count Vasca," she said severely. "You betrayed me, whom you professed to serve. You would now betray him to whom you have transferred your allegiance."

"For your sake," he answered. "Do not forget that."

"For my sake?"

"You are a princess in Drusseniand. You would be queen. As your knight I could but draw a good sword in your service; as a king I can give you my hand to help you mount the throne you covet."

"I have ceased to covet a throne. Tomorrow I die."

"Never by my will. I am here to save you. By the king's permission I am here. If I can win your consent to be my wife he has promised you life and freedom. Even so far is Count Vasca powerful. But I have a far greater aim. Consent, and we will leave this dungeon and the city. Before nightfall tomorrow Yadasara will be in our hands, the king our prisoner. It wants but the sharp note of a trumpet to call half the city to my banner."

"Then let the trumpet sound at daybreak. Revolution will shake the city, and I shall be saved."

He paused a moment.

"The fortress is not yet in my hands, else had I not been forced to gain the king's permission before I came to you. I cannot save you unless you come with me. From this dungeon the king protects us, afterward my friends your subjects."

"And Sir Verrall?"

"Him I cannot save. I would have done so if I could, but it is impossible. His followers demand his death, as they do the death of all those who have been brought into this land to fight for me. He is a foreigner—a brave man I grant still, a foreigner."

"And you will be king tomorrow, so you tell me."

"Ay, as sure as that torch begins to burn low and shows that time claims us for its own."

He spoke in a different tone. I perceived that his patience was nearly exhausted.

Preached at Trinity Church On Sunday.

Rev. Rowe M .Seymour very acceptably occupied the pulpit of Trinity United Church last Sabbath. His subjects for the day were "Men of Passion, Action and Thought," and "A Little Man Made Great." Many of the congregation knew Mr. Seymour as a small boy at Northport, when his father, Rev. J. C. Seymour was stationed there .

Big Dividends Paid by Brewery.

The Dividend of 50 cents per share on the Common Stock of The Brading Breweries, Limited, is indicative of the increased business being enjoyed by this old established brewery. It is reported that the Company's sales have been increasing steadily each month this year, and that the Company has now become one of the important factors in the Market. The recent expansion in Montreal and Eastern Quebec will soon be reflected in increased earnings. The Brading products are now distributed throughout the whole of Ontario and Quebec, and as the old name is as well known in the United States as it is in Canada, the increased tourist traffic expected this summer should prove a decided benefit.— Adv

Minister Ordained.

The Reverend Edward Hammel Costigan, of Toronto, was ordained into Holy Orders at the Church of St. Mary, Navan, near Ottawa, on Monday, May 28th, by the Right Rev. The Lord Bishop of Ottawa. The young clergyman was a former Napanee boy and graduated at the Collegiate Institute, and from there went to Trinity College, Toronto. He is the son of the late Edward Costigan, L.S.T., who was for some years rector of St. Mark's, Deseronto, and, after that, of St. John's, Portland St., Toronto, until his death in 1910. He also a grandson of the late H. M. Derocbe, M.A., K.C., of Napanee. The Bishop of Ottawa has been pleased to appoint Mr. Costigan curate of St. John's Church, Smith's Falls.

GUARDING MILLIONS.

Bank Robbery Very Rarely Attempted In England.

The fact that a bank robbery is so very rarely attempted in England seems to show that there is little wrong with the system of defence built up, says a writer in Tit-Bits.

Vast sums of money are continually travelling about the country Every scrap of money in the provinces, whether notes or coin, has to be sent there from London. The amount of new Treasury notes alone put into circulation each week usually varies from five to ten million pounds.

These facts are well known to the criminal classes. The heavy motor-bullion vans are a familiar sight in the City, as are the carts which lash-en with the glittering ingots of gold silver, wait outside the premises of dealers in precious metals. Loss, however, is practically unknown.

The strong-rooms of English banks contain not only the bank's cash reserves, but valuables deposited by their customers—jewels and plate, priceless family heirlooms and works of art, in addition to vast quantities of bonds and securities.

The strong-room of to-day is a marvel of engineering. The walls are built of brick, steel, and concrete. A modern strong-room door sometimes weighs over twenty tons. In many cases, in the interests of safety, keys and the keyholes are abolished. Combination locks are used instead.

Other doors have time-locks in addition. These locks are set by an independent official, and the door, once closed, cannot possibly be opened until the expiration of the set time.

In the Bank of England, now being rebuilt, vaults are under construction which are undersecond to be the strongest in the world. It is said they will resist concentrated bomb attacks, and that there are inspection passages and tunnels along which guards will patrol night and day. One of the items to be guarded by the bank is over £150,000,000 in solid gold.

"The (blind) man answered and said unto them, (the Pharisees) Why herein is a marvellous thing that ye know not from whence he is, (Jesus) and yet he hath opened mine eyes. Now we know that God heareth not sinners : but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him He heareth. Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind If this man was not of God, he could do nothing. They answered and said unto him, Thou wast altogether born in sins, and dost thou teach us ? And they cast him out. Jesus heard that they had cast him out ; and when He had found him, He said unto him, Dost thou believe on the Son of God ? He answered and said, Who is the Lord that I might believe on him? And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him and it is he that talketh with thee. And he said, Lord I believe, and he worshipped Him." John 2 : 32-38.

I'm a poor sinner and nothing at all,
But Jesus Christ is my all in all.

RACE OF DOG-EATERS.

East Indian Tribe Have Dog-Eating Propensities.

Hot dog (literally) is one of the greatest luxuries of the Marus, a branch of the Kachin tribe, whose home originally was in the remarkable valley of India, a mountainous region bordering on China.

They are called "Kachins" because of their dog-eating propensities. In physical appearance and dress the Marus do not differ from the other tribes inhabiting their immediate neighborhood, but their language bears a closer affinity to the Burmese tongue than to the Kachin speech.

Among the Marus each village represents a community which elects its own chief, and as there are no sub-tribes among them each village constitutes a distinct clan.

The Marus are proverbially very dirty in their personal habits — so much so that during the burning of the jungle for the cultivation of their rice crops, their faces and bodies get smeared with a mixture of charcoal and sweat.

This in time gets so embedded into the skin that no amount of washing can remove the pigmentation, which has in consequence altered the natural color of their complexion, and for this reason they are known to their neighbors as "Maru Chang bok" that is, Black Marus.

Though the married folk wear their hair long, the others affect the fashionable "bob" and the method of removing their superfluous look is worth noting, as it is unique in the art of hair-dressing.

The hair is first well wetted and combed, and then placed over the sharp edge of a "dah," a kind of short sword, and cut by tapping it with a wooden mallet.

The tribe sow and clean their own cotton; and the women, who are great adepts in artistically ornamenting their garments, weave all the cloth required for the use of the family.

The men, as is to be expected from primitive people, are expert trappers and hunters, their chief weapon for this purpose being a bow, which is formidable in structure and deadly in effect. It is such a powerful weapon that the bow has to be strung by placing the feet against it and pulling the string with both hands till a notch in the arrow spear fits into the string and then it is ready for use. The arrow is sent on its unerring and deadly mission by means or a trigger.

Their religion consists of the worship of evil spirits, which they conciliate by offering sacrifices of fowls, pigs and cows—but never of cats and dogs!

Blood Coursing Through Veins.

Assuming the heart to beat sixty-nine times a minute at ordinary heart pressure, the blood courses through the veins at the rate of 207 yards in a minute, or seven miles an hour, 168 miles a day, and 61,320 miles a year. If a man eighty-four years of age could have had one single blood corpuscle floating in his blood all his life it would have travelled in that time nearly 5,150,000 miles.

CANADIAN WOMEN'S WORK

BY LUCINDA.

"Lucinda was motoring last week and she saw the first of the hundreds of picnic parties that will be held during the summer—she also saw the remains of the feast disfiguring the fresh grass of the roadside, and wondered why grown up folk had so little thought for others as to leave papers and boxes, tin cans and banana skins just where they picnicked and ride joyfully away. Even in quiet places in the woods where the flowers of early June are blooming and the grass is starred with blossoms, you come across signs of former picnics or of it could sell hooked rugs and camps. Now we may say that braided mats to the tourists, as some of the roadside picnickers are our friends from across the way. Some of them are, no doubt, but as a usual thing these visitors go on to a tourist camp or an hotel and certainly they do not go into the woods far from the road. "What shall we do with the papers ?" some one will ask. Take them along with you until you come to a place where you see a basket for such things in a town, or take them home and put them into your garbage pail. This brings us to the suggestion that more baskets for rubbish should be placed near villages and towns to collect papers, etc., so that no one would have any excuse to leave them to spoil the landscape of which we, as Canadians, are proud.

A letter from a western tea room says that the lady in charge of it could sell hooked rugs and braided mats to the tourists, as she had them. Again last week, are our friends from across the in an entirely different section of the district in which this column is read, we saw some patchwork quilts of beautiful color and design hanging upon a line, as the mistress of the house was evidently housecleaning. She may not want to sell them, but she or her friends could make others from the same patterns and begin to establish an industry for Ontario.

June is the brides' month. Brides of our various circles will be leaving on wedding trips longer or shorter and many will go by motor. They have pretty clothes for every occasion, but a bride of last June says that she and her husband had a wonderful trip to the mountains, because they took no trunks, only bags, along in the car. She wore her going away dress and coat the afternoon dress, and a little silk frock for the hotel and then the next day when she started, she put on a knitted suit and a felt hat to match, with a bright scarf and enjoyed life. "And no one guessed we were just married," she said. Probably many people did, but they didn't know it, so that did them just as well. "The frock I wore to leave home did for an afternoon dress, and as I didn't stay long in the same place the one dinner frock did and my other clothes were all fresh and pretty when I came home," said the girl with a year's experience in matrimony. So many girls want to wear all their things one after another and by a few weeks they have nothing new. Of course, if you are going to stay at a mountain or seaside resort or with friends, especially your new 'in-laws,' you want more changes for parties will be given for you. But for the young husband and wife who are bent on enjoying each other's society, a few pretty clothes will do quite well and be much less trouble.

Some of the houses on the highway, that have signs telling the travelling public that there hospitality will be found, look very attractive. The windows are open, with screens to keep out flies and mosquitos, the grass is cut and flowers are on the lawn. Easy verandah chairs invite the men and women who have been driving all day to rest, and one feels sure that a hot bath is a possibility. These places are so attractive that we are afraid they will have all the visitors and the shut up looking house with a rather uninviting air, will be passed by. An experienced caterer to the tourist trade said, "I was worried when I began to serve people from the big cities with meals, but I found that they would sooner have home made bread, good fresh butter, bacon and eggs and vegetables picked in the garden with a salad, and a home made pie or pudding was what they liked when they were in the country. We all like a change and the kind of meals served at the city hotels had been enjoyed, but the country fare was enjoyed also."

Seven hundred women dined at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, last week when the Toronto Municipal Chapter of the I.O.D.E. entertained in honor of the visiting delegates to the annual meeting held in Toronto. The toast to "The Empire" was given by Miss Church, the National President, and Miss Jessie Baker, a bright young speaker spoke on "Canada Future." The National Council of Women, also meeting in Toronto, discussed child and mother problems and Mrs. H. P. Plumptre, the president of the Ontario Division, of the Canadian Red Cross said that the appeal of "Mother's Day" be changed from the praise of mothers who suffered so much and asked so little, into a practical movement to improve the conditions of the young mothers of Canada, so that the maternal mortality among them should not be so appallingly high. The western women said that the Rotary Club, the Gyro Club and other men's organizations, were taking up the matter seriously, for the sake of the mothers of Canada.

The fields and roadsides are starred with the golden blossoms of the dandelions. Terrible weeds says the farmer and gardener. Well ,we can make use of the weeds, for they have some excellent qualities. Here is a tried recipe for dandelion wine. 3 qts. of dandelion buds and flowers, pour 4 qts. of boiling water over them and let stand over night. Strain throug a cloth, add 3 lemons, with seeds removed, 3½ lbs. white sugar. Put on the fire until the sugar is dissolved, then pour into a covered jar and let stand 15 days before bottling.

TYPHOID FEVER.

Typhoid Fever is usually caused by using contaminated water or milk. The most effective and practical way to prevent Typhoid Fever is, there fore, to safeguard water and milk supplies. To do this is, without question, the responsibility of every municipal government. To do this is also the common-sense procedure of the families who have their own water and milk supply.

If this card is taken, there is but little danger of contracting typhoid fever as long as no other water and milk is used. During the summer, many go out into the country on short and long trips. It is at such times that water and milk, which are not safeguarded as to their safety, are frequently used.

Amongst those who are recovering from typhoid fever are some cases who continue to pass out the germs of the disease. Such persons are known as "disease carriers." As to whether or not these carriers are dangerous, depends largely on their occupation. Carriers should not be employed in the preparation, serving or handling of food.

It was demonstrated beyond question during the Great War, amongst Canadian soldiers and those of other countries, that the use of typhoid vaccine gives practically a sure protection against this disease.

Because of these facts we advise inoculation against typhoid fever for anyone who is at all likely to use water and milk from sources he does not know, and who is not prepared to boil, or otherwise make safe, the water and milk before using.

PRISON PETS.

Pigeons Walk Around Exercise Yard With Prisoners.

At a certain prison pigeons walk round the exercise grounds every morning alongside the prisoners. Each pigeon eats out of the hand of its own particular prisoner, and when the man is in his cell the bird is usually found perching on the bars of his window.

Dartmoor's particular pet is the jackdaw, and most convicts break the monotony of prison life by forming an affection for one of these inveterate thieves.

Because o. the cloth and material made at Wakefield, the mouse is the particular pet of this prison. The fluff from the cloth forms a splendid bed for the mice. Many of these residents are so well trained that when a prisoner returns to his cell after being at work they will be lined up, ready to climb up his clothes and rest on his shoulders.

Many of the rats at Wadsworth Prison will stand on their back legs and beg for food. The prisoners often sleep with them inside their shirts.

At Parkhurst convicts keep butterflies and bees, many a splendid hive having been built in each window. The emerald lizard, a pet of remarkable intelligence, is also a favorite at this prison.

Dorchester Prison is a veritable aviary, and many beautiful birds are "adopted" by prisoners. Wormwood Scrubs also favors birds as pets, the particular favorite being the sparrow.

An old jag at Portland smuggled and kept a puppy in his cell. He was discovered at last, and the puppy was taken away. It was then eight weeks old, and was taken home by a warder.

Every day the little dog wandered back to the prison gate, and when the convict was released he took his pet home with him.

More than one convict has shown great fascination for a blade of grass he has planted in the corner of his cell.

Apples on Trial.

To discover the health value of different varieties of apples, the Lister Institute is experimenting with a number of guinea-pigs.

Dr. S. S. Zilva, the vitamin expert, is directing the experiments as part of the work for which the British Empire Marketing Board has made a grant of £3,000 for five years. It is proposed to make public the same knowledge of the vitamin content of the apple as is known about the orange and various vegetables.

Each guinea-pig will have its apple ration reduced to the minimum necessary to provide a certain amount of vitamins. An important part of the test will be to discover whether there is any vitamin difference between apples that have been in cold storage and those that are fresh.

Kroehler Made Chesterfield Suites

Buy this famous name when you buy Upholstered Furniture

The greatest thing you can buy in our living room furniture is the name of the manufacturer—Kroehler—who made it. This not only assures you present and future satisfaction, but guarantees a modest cost to you and an authoritative style which other makes seldom possess.

This is because Kroehler Living Room Furniture is made by the largest manufacturer of upholstered furniture in the world.

Famous for its "Hidden Qualities," Kroehler furniture stands out as far superior to ordinary living room furniture. All frames are of selected hardwood, strongly braced, glued and doweled at the corners—Instead of soft wood merely nailed together. In place of the old-style webbing which would sag and give way after a few years, Kroehler furniture has a spring steel understructure, on which are mounted resilient, non-sagging springs of finest quality. Were you to lift the covering you would find underneath a filling of sterilized flax fibre, padded with clean, white cotton. Seat cushions are filled with flexible springs assembled and held in place by an exclusive patented Kroehler process, which insures shapely cushions at all times.

"My answer is no," she said firmly.

"The rack is a cruel companion princess. Were I the greatest villain in Drussenland, yet should I be a gentler comrade than the rack."

"The rack kills the body. A villain would break my heart."

"Time is meaningless when in the rack's embrace," he answered. "Every second is an hour when agony thrills through every nerve. You may live for hours, and hours in such a case mean a lifetime."

"Yet I shall die honestly, loving a true man. Can a lifetime, be it of hours or years, be better spent?"

"You love this foreign dog?"

"As my own soul."

She rose to her feet as she said it. My time had nearly come. Cautiously I felt that my sword was loose in its scabbard.

"The torch burns low. Thing once more."

I wondered how he intended to take her without her consent, as O'Ryan had said he might do. Would he attempt to drug her? Suddenly he drew his sword. Was he about to wound her and thus secure her? He stirred the torch into a brighter flame with the point of his weapon.

"See, I make the time as long as possible," he said defiantly.

"Though all the torches in Drussenland were here and each one were lighted from the dying flame of another, yet that time would not suffice to make me change," said Daria slowly. "I believe—I know—that the God who looks down upon us will give me strength to bear what is before me. Go, Count Vasen, go! You are a double traitor. See that I do not betray you when the rack cracks these limbs of mine."

"I will see to that," he answered harshly. "Your folly shall neither kill my ambition nor make me careless. Perhaps it is for my own safety, perhaps pity for you, I hardly know which, but the rack shall not hurt you. You shall make an easier end. There lies the death road. You shall take it tonight."

He threw his cloak back from his shoulder to give his sword arm freedom. Whether he meant to kill her I shall never know. My time had come.

Daria sprang toward him.

"For that I thank you. You could do me no greater service."

She clutched the bosom of her dress with both hands and tore it open, showing her white flesh.

"Strike, and strike deep!"

His moment of surprise was my moment of opportunity. I drew myself up and stood in the dungeon, sword in hand. Daria turned with a low cry. The count, with an oath, pushed her aside, so that she fell upon the couch, and rushed at me. I remembered that the trap was just behind me, and I stepped aside as our blades met.

"You must crush your enemy now count. It is your last chance," I hissed. "The road you were to take tonight I take. The death way is for you."

He did not answer. His eyes were fixed on mine, his sword flashed with mine. It was to be a duel to the death. We both knew that. He tried to force me back toward the hole. I tried to make him change ground with me. We neither of us succeeded, yet he had the advantage, for the flickering torch was before me and spoiled my sight somewhat. Twice, thrice, he made a sudden effort to finish the matter, once almost breaking through my guard. The point of his weapon touched my arm and the blood showed. The count smiled. The next moment I had touched him, and there ensued a fierce encounter for a few moments. I succeeded in getting round him. Now his back was toward the trap, the torchlight in his eyes. The advantage was with me. Whether it was the sight that troubled him, or that his courage failed him I do not know, but he fought less freely. Time after time he only just managed to keep my point from his breast, and unconsciously he drew nearer to the hole. Once or twice his eyes left mine for an instant—a bad sign—but it did not make me careless. Not for a moment did I forget the man with whom I had to deal.

Suddenly he attacked me more fiercely than before. "King!" I heard him utter between his teeth. Well could I understand him. His schemes were ripe. Tomorrow Yadasara would be his if only he could slay me. His swordsmanship was not equal to his ferocity, or perhaps he underrated my skill. I watched him, and I grew calmer. I waited until his heel was at the edge of the trap. Now I prepared to strike and end it, but once more he escaped me. He forced me back across the dungeon until my foot touched the wall, and he laughed. It was a strange laugh, such as few men laugh, for it ended in a gurgling sigh, almost like the sound a pipe gives as the last of the water runs out, for the end had come. My blade had passed right through him. He threw up his arms and staggered back, falling beside the hole. I went to him.

"He is dead."

"Clinton!"

Daria was beside me.

"My love," I said, kissing her, "forget that name for awhile. We will go. I know the road. The danger is over."

"But you—you"—

"I am the count for tonight."

I took the cloak from the dead man and threw it around me. I took his sword and put it on instead of my own, and I drew his hat well over my eyes.

"Here is the key," I said, drawing it from the cloak. "Stay! in case they should enter the dungeon when we are gone and should find that it would betray us."

I took the dead man by his limp arms and drew him to the edge of the trap. Then I let him go, and he slid noiselessly out of sight.

"Now, come!"

Her arm was in mine and I was fitting the key in the lock when there was a sound of voices in the corridor without.

"Vasen! The traitor! The traitor, Vasen!"

"The king!" whispered Daria.

A thundering knock came at the door.

"Open in the king's name!"

"We are lost," said Daria calmly.

I drew my sword and threw off the cloak. At least I might die fighting.

"Clinton, kiss me."

"Open, open!" they shouted without.

"Kiss me."

I kissed her, one long kiss.

"Now kill me," she said.

Perhaps the request put the thought into my head.

"You do not fear death?"

"No"

I pointed to the trap.

"Only dead men take it, they say, and he still in the river bed. Yet one dead man rose to the surface. We might rise alive. It is a poor chance, but if death comes it will find us in each other's arms. It is better than waiting for tomorrow."

She shuddered a little. Then she took my hands.

"I am ready," she said.

"Quickly!"

I sat down on the edge of the trap, even on the spot where a few moments before the dead count had rested.

"Sit beside me," I said to Daria. "Now put your arms round me so, how your feet between mine, so. Do not struggle. To fall straight is our only chance. My darling, I love you, I love you!"

Our lips met.

"It is time. In another moment the door will be in."

I shuffled over the edge as I spoke, holding with one hand.

"You are ready?"

"Yes."

"Now!"

I let go my hold, and we slipped downward.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE brave woman in my arms uttered no sound as we went downward, slowly at first, but quickening our pace almost immediately. I felt her arms tighten round me a little, that was all.

We so held each other that practically we fell extended to full length. I do not remember whether I was conscious of striking the top of the rocky incline or not, but I believe I was. We must have struck it at an angle which saved our limbs. I was conscious of being still whole in body. My arm protected Daria's head. My own, I suppose, I had sense enough to raise a little. The way was rough and uneven. I have thought since that this shaft was originally a stratum of softer material in the heart of the rock and that those who had originally made this death way had followed it, since the working was easy. It is the only explanation I can find for the fact that after falling almost sheer for the first few feet it should suddenly change down—down faster and faster! Still feet first, I believe. Some moments I feel sure I was conscious, at others I was not. I seem to remember that our speed increased, that loose dust got into my fast closed eyes. I seemed to cling closer to Daria as if in some way she were protecting me. I seem to remember hearing the sound of the swirling water coming nearer and nearer until it roared like continuous thunder, and then a swift plunge to death.

Then came a blank. I have no recollection whatever of what happened from the moment we plunged into the water until I awoke suddenly out of a faint, it may have been, to feel a cold wind upon my face and to draw into my lungs half a dozen long breaths of it. They were drawn in rapid succession, and then I felt the water close over my head again. I put out my arms to struggle, and a weight began to slip from me. I was fully conscious in a moment and closed one arm again only just in time to prevent Daria slipping from my grasp. I turned upon my back and with considerable difficulty shifted Daria's position until she lay upon my chest. With one hand I steadied her and with the other and my legs I struck out for shore close beside the rock.

Fortunately for us the waters on this side, though running rapidly, had no swirling current in them. I had but to keep afloat and steer myself with my free arm and feet. I approached close to the bank, and there, straining at the painter, was a boat, the water lapping noisily from its bows.

I had to use force to unclasp Daria's arms from my neck. Perhaps I hurt her a little, for she sighed again. Standing in the water, I lifted her into the boat, then, working my hands along the gunwale to the stern, I got in myself. It was a comparatively easy matter to wrench the rope from its fastening on the bank, and the next moment we were drifting slowly down the stream. Not yet had I time to attend to Daria. I seized the oars and worked hard to get across, making slow headway, but drifting a great deal.

Of immediate pursuit I had no fear. Probably they would not go to my dungeon until the morning. It was Count Vasen they sought and those who attempted to follow after him, even if they knew the way he was to take, would have to fight their way out of the city. O'Ryan had told me that friends were watching over the count's safety that night. That some one had betrayed Vasen would probably only precipitate the revolution by a few hours. Strange that the success with which the count had arranged his plans should be the means of our safety.

I lifted Daria from the boat and laid her on the bank. Then I let the boat go downstream. It had served me well. It would be ill if its presence should tell tales of me at dawn tomorrow.

Then I looked to Daria, and even as I bent over her she opened her eyes.

"My love," I whispered, "we are safe."

I should never have reached the woods had I had to carry her all the way. She roused up presently, which is hardly to be wondered at, what with the cold and the jolting.

To be Continued.

"HELPED ME WONDERFULLY"

Woman Strengthened by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Port Colborne, Ont.—"After having an operation, I was very miserable, weak, nervous and very near unfit to work. I saw Lydia E.
